Egypt in ancient times , was sometimes referred to as the back land, in an allusion to the rich, alluvial soil created year-upon-year by the Nile floods. It was also the reason why human habitation had existed in the Nile valley since time immemorial. But the Egypt of the pyramids, mummies, payri and hieroglyphics did not beging to flourish until 5,000years ago, even though the bountiful Nile continued to bring wealth, prosperity and the prospect of good harvests to the land.
